Extracts. MY LOWLAND HAME. Ye autumn some o' life, away I wearied and o thee) But gie me back the raptured day

O' careless misney-Gie back my poloobnales, young and free That roused our boisy game, And shared the pring o' life wi me Around my levland hame.

The winter hid the landscape bur, And poortith's blasts were chill, I felt them not, for cloudy care And I were strangers still ; And a' the cartly sweets were mine

That happines could claim; For brightly did contentment chiuc Around my lowland hame. Thro custles and and border frays

My boyish facey strayed, Where steel-sled knights o' early days Off fought wi bow and blade. And we'll my mither could disclose Their tales o leve and fame, For many an' meight fortress rose

Beside my lovland hame.

My schoolmates now are scatter'd wide, The golden deams are fled, And manhood's callous years of pride Are planted in their stead. Beit gold Dumffice, rosm where I will, I'll think of thee the same, And oft in dreams I'll ace thee still,

My happy lowland hame. S. HENRY, 42nd Highlanders.

ARKANSAS INHOSPITALITY. We tried to get some fish from a family of Germans who have taken up a claim right in the middle of the park; but being surly; disagreeable people, and possibly feeling they rather like the man who, travelling in kansas, rides up late one day to a lonely ranche. The sole occupant is a woman, who comes to the door hearing a traveller arrive; and the following dialogue ensues: Man: "Good day, ma'am, how goes?

Can you give my horse a feed?" Woman : "Wa'al, I hain't got much." Man: "Can you give bin some corn and Woman: "Wa'nt, I hain't got no corn, had
